2. Code of Business Conduct

2.1 High Ethical Standards: The Key to Our Success

Our Code of Business Conduct is a part of the company's way of life. The Code spells out the high ethical and legal standards of business conduct we follow and is intended to provide a framework for good decision making. The objective is to emphasize the importance of understanding the ethical implications of our actions and to encourage individuals acting on behalf of the company to do the "right thing."

Compliance is the requirement that workforce members abide by contractual obligations, company policies, and all applicable requirements, standards and laws.

The company requires those acting on its behalf to be respectful, fair, and courteous to each other and those affiliated with the company. All workforce members are expected to conduct themselves in a respectful and businesslike manner in the workplace, during work-related activities and in their dealings with co-workers, leadership and customers.

The company is committed to providing a safe working environment free of intimidation, retaliation, discrimination, threatening speech or behavior, threats of harm, or violence, whether engaged in by another workforce member or a third party, such as vendors or volunteers.

All workforce members are required to act with honesty, integrity and impartiality when dealing with policyholders, customers, claimants, agents, providers, vendors, regulators, competitors, the community, fellow workforce members and board members. To earn and keep their trust, workforce members must make every effort to avoid even the appearance of illegal or unethical conduct. This includes identifying and appropriately communicating known or suspected violations of the law or of this Code. Failure to comply with the standards of behavior set forth in this Code of Business Conduct may result in discipline up to and including termination of your employment.

Leadership and the Board of Directors of Emergent Holdings, Inc. and its subsidiaries are committed to providing avenues through which ethical issues may be raised, reviewed and resolved openly and honestly. Help is available when you have questions about how to maintain company ethical standards. If you find yourself in a situation that may raise an ethical issue, and you need help in either understanding or addressing that issue, you should review and follow the guidelines under the heading, How We Solve Ethical Problems.

2.2 Conflicts of Interest

Employees are required to annually disclose any relationships, outside business dealings, participations on outside business-related boards, and any other interests or activities that may conflict with the interests of the enterprise. Disclosures should be made any time a potential or actual conflict occurs throughout the year. Any information disclosed by employees will be considered and maintained as confidential.

A. General Policy

- Workforce Members' Duty - All workforce members have a duty to the company to be entirely free from influence of any conflicting interests when representing the company in business dealings or making recommendations which may influence an action of the company. You should avoid personal interests that might conflict with your loyalty to the company or compromise your judgment on the job.
- Personal Activities - The company respects workforce members' privacy in personal activities and financial affairs. This Code is intended to help workforce members avoid potential conflicts of interest.
- Conflicts - The company cannot foresee or define every situation that might be considered a conflict of interest. A conflict of interest exists when an obligation or a situation resulting from a workforce member's personal activities or financial affairs may adversely influence his or her judgment in performing his or her duty to the company.
- How do you know when a conflict of interest is present?
In some cases, the conflict may be easy to identify, while in others it may not be as apparent. To identify less obvious conflicts, you may find it helpful to ask yourself:

“Are my job-related decisions made on sound business principles or have I permitted personal interests to influence my business judgment?”

While many potential conflicts are more theoretical than real, it is important to disclose and resolve such cases promptly. If you have any questions whether a situation could be considered a conflict of interest, contact your leadership or the appropriate Compliance Official.

B. Guides for Compliance

The following situations describe areas where a possible conflict of interest may occur and disclosure is required:

- Financial Interests - A conflict of interest may exist when a workforce member, directly or indirectly, or one of his or her close relatives, owns any beneficial interest in an organization which is a competitor of the enterprise, or which has current or reasonably likely and immediate prospective business with the enterprise as a policyholder, agent, vendor, customer, or contractor, and when such workforce member may be able to influence such business with the enterprise.

A conflict is not likely to exist, however, where the financial interest consists of stock shares, bonds, or other securities of a company listed on a public securities exchange, and the amount of such interest is less than five percent (5%) of the value of the class of such securities.

- Outside Work - A conflict of interest may exist when a workforce member, or one of his or her close relatives, serves as a director, officer, employee, consultant, agent, including board participation, of an organization which is a competitor of the enterprise, or which has current or prospective business with the enterprise as a vendor, customer, policyholder, agent, vendor, contractor, or other entity that may have interests that may not align with those of the enterprise.

A conflict of interest may exist when a workforce member engages in an independent business venture or performs work or services for another business, civic, educational, or charitable organization, board of directors, and/or committee to the extent that the activity prevents the workforce member from devoting time and effort to the enterprise or impairs the workforce member's ability to act in the best interests of the enterprise. This also includes performing work or receiving wages while on sick leave, including LTD, STD, and FMLA unless said work is disclosed and subsequently approved by Human Resources.

All employees are expressly prohibited from engaging in any activity that competes with the company, compromises its interest and/or objectives, or creates an impermissible conflict of interest between the outside employment and the employee's employment at the company.

- Trading with the Enterprise - A conflict of interest may exist when a workforce member, or one of his or her close relatives, is a principal party to a transaction with the enterprise, devoting time and effort to the enterprise or impairs the workforce member's ability to act in the best interests of the enterprise. An example of conflict of this kind would exist when an employee, or their relative or cohabitant, owns a computer refurbishing company and the employee, or relative or cohabitant, purchases company surplus computer equipment through the refurbishing company.

COI Q&A

Q: Who is required to complete a COI Form?

A: In accordance with the Corporate Ethics and Compliance policy, all employees (exempt, non- exempt or bargaining unit) must complete the conflicts of interest form upon hire and annually thereafter. Disclosures should also be made anytime an actual or potential conflict arises. Contractors are not required to complete the COI form.

Q: How do I know if a conflict of interest is present?

A: In some cases, the conflict may be easy to identify. You should contemplate if the relationship or transaction conflicts with the best interests of the enterprise. For instance, it is almost always a conflict of interest for you to work at the same time for the enterprise and on behalf of a competitor, vendor, or customer. Likewise, it is usually a conflict of interest for you or members of your immediate family to have substantial financial or business interests with a competitor, customer or vendor of the enterprise. You should contact your leader, or the Compliance Office if you are not certain if a situation is a conflict of interest. When in doubt, report.

Q: Am I required to report gifts or entertainment I received in the current year?

A: No. You are required to disclose any gift or entertainment as they are offered and received.

Q: Do I need to disclose my relative who works for the enterprise, and with whom I have no direct reporting relationship with?

A: Yes. According to policy, a conflict may exist if a relative or cohabitant works for the enterprise, depending on the reporting relationship or job functions performed.

CONSIDER THIS

Regarding Relatives and Cohabitants:

Bob's spouse works at a health claims processing company.

The company would be at risk if Bob is privy to our company's specific systems processes used to review and pay claims and he shared those system processes with his spouse.

Bob is NOT privy to his specific information, so this is a not a significant business risk.

Regarding Financial Interests:

Dr. Jane, an employee, makes benefit decisions for members. She has authority to approve or deny services based on medical necessity and policy. Prior to approving or denying services, Dr. Jane checks the company's key performance indicators (KPIs) to determine if the cost of the services in question could impact this year's employee incentives.

Regarding Outside Work:

Mary, a pharmacist at the company, is approached by XYZ Pharmaceuticals, a drug manufacturer, and asked to help with a clinical survey for a new drug. The position is paid and requires Mary to advocate and promote the new drug. Mary should decline this opportunity as it could conflict with the company's policies and may influence her judgment in performing her duty to the company.

- Misuse of Confidential Information - A conflict of interest may exist when a workforce member, or one of his or her close relatives, uses for his or her personal gain or for benefit of others any confidential or proprietary information, including but not limited to information regarding members or claimants obtained through his or her employment or affiliation with the enterprise.

See example

- Misappropriation of Business Opportunities - A conflict of interest may exist when a workforce member, without knowledge and consent of the enterprise, appropriates to himself or herself or to another person or organization the benefit of any business venture, opportunity or potential opportunity about which such workforce member learns or develops in the course of his or her employment or affiliation with the enterprise, and which is related to any current or prospective business of the enterprise.

See example

- Relatives or Cohabitants - The term "relative" refers to family members, such as a spouse, parent, child, cousin, sibling, including step-relative and in-law. Family members also include domestic partners and any person who is part of your household. The term "cohabitant" means two persons living in the same household. The fact that a relative or cohabitant may work for the enterprise, vendor, client, competitor does not automatically mean that a conflict of interest exists. To ensure a conflict does not exist, workforce members are required to disclose employment of a relative or cohabitant by the enterprise. Each disclosure will then be reviewed to determine whether a conflict of interest exists in that particular situation. For example, a conflict of interest may exist when a workforce member, directly or indirectly, supervises a relative or cohabitant employed by the enterprise.

Likewise, a conflict of interest may exist when a workforce member processes claims payments for relatives or cohabitants who are claimants of one of our clients' plans, or otherwise is charged with making decisions in which a relative or cohabitant may have a financial interest.

- Gifts, Favors or Entertainment - As more specifically detailed in Section 2.4, a conflict of interest may arise when a workforce member, or one of his or her close relatives, accepts a gift, favor or entertainment from a person or organization which is a competitor of the enterprise, or which has current or prospective business with the enterprise as a policyholder, claimant, agent, vendor, provider, customer or contractor. Whether a conflict or the appearance of a conflict exists with respect to a particular gift or favor depends on whether acceptance of the gift, favor or entertainment, or the prospect of future gifts, favors or entertainment, actually did impair or could reasonably be seen as possibly impairing the ability of the workforce member to act solely in the best interests of the enterprise in dealings with such person or organization.

- Participation on External Boards of Directors - A conflict of interest may exist when workforce members serve on an external board of directors or other committee to the extent that the activity prevents the workforce member from devoting time and effort to the company's business which his or her position requires, or to the extent the external entity is a competitor of the company and/or its parent corporation, or which has current or prospective business with the company as a policyholder, agent, claimant, vendor, customer, or contractor. Anyone that serves on business-related/community boards, or committees on behalf of the company, acknowledges that the company has the right to designate an alternative corporate representative(s) to serve on behalf of the company at any time during the term. Additionally, workforce members serving on business-related boards on behalf of the company shall resign their position upon the company's request in the event their employment with the company ends.

A business-related board or committee is typically one wherein a workforce member serves as a corporate or industry representative on the board or committee of an organization related in any way to the business of the enterprise (including the insurance industry in general). The Compliance Office solicits external board participation disclosures from executives at least annually and disclosures should be updated throughout the year as necessary.

CONSIDER THIS

Examples of Prohibited Relationships

Employee directly reports to their spouse or family member who is their manager or leader.

Employee processes claims for their family member who is a member of the company.

Employee works directly with a vendor who is a family member.

Employee has a reporting relationship with a significant other, or one with whom they are romantically involved.

C. Disclosing Potential Conflicts of Interest

Each year, employees must submit a disclosure form that includes information relating to possible conflicts of interest, including their participation on any business-related board of directors or committees. In addition to the annual report, all workforce members have an affirmative duty to disclose to their management for reporting to Human Resources, at the time it arises, any situation, transaction or relationship which may constitute a conflict of interest.

A workforce member who is in doubt if a potential or actual conflict exists in a particular case should make a timely disclosure of the facts to his or her immediate leader.

Employees who work together may naturally form friendships or relationships either in or out of their workplace. Any relationship that interferes with the harmonious work environment, teamwork, productivity or creates a hostile work environment is prohibited.

D. Participation in Conferences or Meetings

Workforce members may not solicit customers, vendors, vendors, providers, consultants, or agents to pay for the costs of travel, lodging, registration fees or other personal expenses related to conference or meeting attendance.

Cash honorariums or any other financial consideration received related to a workforce member's position with the company may not be accepted. Should any such payment be received, the workforce member must process it per the guidelines in the Travel and Business Expense Reimbursement policy.

In most situations, payment for travel-related expenses shall be reimbursed by the company in accordance with the applicable Travel and Business Expense Reimbursement policy.

Attendance at or participation in conferences or meetings unrelated to current or potential company business are not subject to this Code.

If a current or potential customer, vendor, vendor, provider, consultant or agent offers to pay for travel, lodging or registration fees associated with a meeting or conference the following requirements must be met:

- Vice president or above approval must be obtained prior to attending the conference or meeting
- The expenses paid by the vendor must be reasonable and consistent with the applicable Travel and Business Expense Reimbursement policy
- Workforce member attendance must be for a valid business purpose and a reasonable adjunct to a business relationship
- The expenses for attendance are reasonable considering the benefits afforded the company and unlikely to compromise the workforce member's ability to carry out their duties
- The workforce member must make a reasonable effort to determine the value of the travel expense associated with the conference(s) or meeting(s) and disclose the amount on the employee conflicts of interest disclosure form as they arise

See note

On at least an annual basis, employees will be asked to submit a formal statement for disclosure of any information relating to the possibility of a conflict of interest.

Amendments should be made if changes or other potential or actual conflicts occur during the year.

2.3 Gifts, Favors, & Entertainment

- A. Workforce members may not give or accept any gift, favor or entertainment from a policyholder, claimant, agent, provider, vendor, regulator, customer or public official that could be perceived to influence the recipient's sound business judgment. The purpose of business entertainment and gifts should be to create good will and to establish a good working relationship, not to gain an unfair or improper advantage or to affect the exercise of a person's sound business judgment. For this purpose, a "gift," "favor" or "entertainment" includes, but is not limited to, any gratuitous service, loan, discount, money, free membership or article of value, but does not include loans from financial institutions on customary terms, articles of nominal value ordinarily used for sales promotion, ordinary "business lunches," or reasonable entertainment consistent with local social and business custom.
- B. The company is committed to respecting the standards of other persons and entities it deals with. As a result, if the standards of another person or entity concerning gifts, favors and entertainment are more restrictive than ours, we will abide by their standards as they apply to their employees to the extent that we are aware of them.
- C. Workforce members are required to disclose receipt of any gifts or entertainment exceeding $100 in value for a single gift or, for more than a single instance within the annual reporting period, exceed $500 in total value. If possible, workforce members are encouraged to obtain leadership approval prior to accepting gifts, favors or entertainment exceeding $100 in value. Examples of gifts that are typically acceptable to receive include, but are not limited to: a fruit basket, a raffle prize, or an umbrella.
- D. Workforce members may not give or receive monetary gifts or cash equivalents, including gift cards and certificates, except for corporate approved programs. Articles of nominal value ordinarily used for sales for promotion may be exchanged. The exchange of business courtesies, such as reasonable and occasional meals and entertainment consistent with social and business custom, is also permissible. No inducements may be offered or accepted from state or federal government workforce members. Workforce members should exercise good judgment in offering or accepting meals, entertainment or other gratuities to avoid any improper influence or the appearance of a conflict. Gifts more than a nominal value must be reported as imputed income for the employee. Please reference the Travel and Business Expense Reimbursement policy.
- E. The temporary receipt by a workforce member of a donation to a company sponsored charitable event shall not constitute the acceptance/receipt of a gift. Workforce members may not receive cash even if it is intended for a company sponsored charitable event but should encourage cash donations to be made directly to the charitable organization. For purpose of this section, company sponsored event is an event where the company is an official sponsor, one where a company executive serves on the board as part of his/her corporate responsibilities, or an event that has been approved by management.
- F. When in doubt as to whether particular gifts and entertainment are appropriate, workforce members should consult with their direct leader.

CONSIDER THIS

What may I give (1 = Yes | 2 = No | 3 = Ask)?

2.4 Confidentiality

- A. The company is strongly committed to and required by state and federal law to safeguard the confidentiality of all personal information that may come to its attention. If you have access to personal information about workforce members, claimants and/or members, such as social security numbers, medical history, treatment, age or marital status, this information must be kept strictly confidential and may only be used for valid business purposes. This information should only be shared with those workforce members and other individuals affiliated with the enterprise that need-to-know this information in order to appropriately discharge their responsibilities. Any disclosure of confidential information in violation of the law or this Code will result in discipline, up to and including, termination.
- B. Workforce members should vigorously safeguard the company's confidential or proprietary information, including but not limited to information regarding members or claimants. Confidential or proprietary information includes information that is not generally disclosed outside the company and that may be useful or helpful to our competitors or adversaries. Any breach of this obligation to maintain the confidentiality of company information will be viewed very seriously and will result in discipline, up to and including termination of employment. To protect this valuable confidential information from improper disclosure, follow these guidelines:
- Share confidential information with others within the enterprise only on a need-to-know basis
 - Any disclosure of confidential information to outsiders, other than in a normal and previously approved course of business, should be specifically approved by management and should be protected by an appropriate (usually written) understanding to maintain confidentiality
 - Avoid inadvertent disclosures of confidential information in conversations with clients, vendors, providers, agents, policyholders and/or claimants
- C. Confidential and proprietary company information which comes to the attention of a workforce member remains confidential and proprietary and should not be disclosed to any third parties outside of the enterprise, even in the event that person ceases to be a workforce member. By way of illustration but not limitation, confidential and proprietary information includes:
- Trade secrets, inventions, mask works, ideas, processes, formulas, source and object codes, data, programs, other works of authorship, know-how, improvements, discoveries, developments, designs and techniques and any other proprietary technology and all proprietary rights
- Information regarding research, development, new products, marketing and selling, business plans, budgets and unpublished or otherwise non-public financial statements, licenses, prices and costs, margins, discounts, credit terms, pricing and billing policies, quoting procedures, methods of obtaining business, forecasts, future plans and potential strategies, employee training, financial projections and business strategies, operational plans, financing and capital-raising plans, activities and agreements, internal services and operational manuals, methods of conducting company business, vendors and vendor information, and purchasing
 - Information regarding customers and/or agents and potential customers and/or agents of the company, including lists, names, representatives, their needs or desires with respect to the types of products or services offered by the company, proposals, bids, contracts and their contents and parties, the type and quantity of products and services provided or sought to be provided to customers and potential customers of the company and other non-public information relating to customers and/or agents and potential customers and/or agents
 - Information regarding any of the company's business partners and their services, including names; representatives, proposals, bids, contracts and their contents and parties, the type and quantity of products and services received by the company, and other non-public information relating to business partner
 - Information regarding employees such as compensation and individual employee skills
 - Any other non-public information which a competitor of the company could use to the competitive disadvantage of the company
 - Any information that we have agreed by contract to maintain confidentially
- Questions regarding ownership issues and the use of confidential or protected information should be directed to the Compliance Office and Office of General Counsel.
- D. Any ideas, processes, inventions, technologies, designs, formulas, discoveries, copyrights, trademarks and/or patents (together referred to collectively as "inventions"), created, developed or obtained while employed by or otherwise affiliated with the company on behalf of the company shall be considered "works made for hire" for the company and shall remain the property of the company during and after employment. Such inventions constitute confidential and proprietary information and shall be vigorously safeguarded.

2.5 Antibribery and Anticorruption Statement

You should act with the highest ethical standards and are prohibited from engaging in criminal acts including any bribery and/or corruption. Corruption and Bribery are both state and federal crimes; engaging in unlawful acts creates risk for both the company as well as you as an individual.

Corruption broadly means giving a benefit or advantage to someone contrary to the rights of others. Bribery, which is a type of corruption, is the offering, giving, receiving, or soliciting of any item of value to influence the actions of an official, or other person, in charge of a public or legal duty. Both bribery of government officials as well as private sector bribery is unlawful and prohibited. Participation in activity in violation of this statement will be subject to disciplinary action up to and including termination.

2.6 Accounting and Reporting

All workforce members must ensure the integrity of our company financial and other records by accurately and truthfully recording all company information, accounting and operating data by strictly following established accounting and business procedures. You as a workforce member should not, for any reason, cause false or artificial entries to be made in company books or records. Examples of improper conduct in this regard include:

- Causing records to appear as though a transaction occurred when it did not
- Causing records to appear as though a transaction occurred at a different time than it truly did
- Fraudulently influencing, coercing, manipulating, or misleading any accountant/auditor engaged in an audit of the financial statements of the company

2.7 Political Activities

The company encourages you to be a good citizen and to participate in the political process. However, if you participate in political activities, including making personal contributions to candidates or political parties, you should do so as a private individual and should not create the impression that you are acting on behalf, or with the support, of the company. You may not use any company property, facilities, or time of any other workforce member for any political activity. Involvement in political activities should be conducted outside of working hours.

2.8 Fair Dealing

All workforce members, including officers and directors, have a responsibility to deal fairly with customers, vendors, competitors and other workforce members. We must not take unfair advantage of anyone through manipulation, concealment, abuse of privileged or confidential information, misrepresentation of facts or any other unfair business practices.

2.9 Antitrust Laws

The company strives to conduct business in a manner that helps maintain a free and competitive market. Activities that would restrain a competitive market, even artificially, are contrary to that philosophy and to federal and state antitrust laws which prohibit agreements or joint conduct between competitors that harms competition, collaborating with a competitor to decide what to charge for products or services and collaborating with a competitor to decide what to pay for services. To avoid any implication of an antitrust violation, workforce members should never discuss sensitive business information with a competitor, never exchange price information or communicate with a competitor about prices, or anything that may affect prices, or customers and be particularly careful when attending trade association meetings or other events where interactions with competitors or customers may occur.

Antitrust laws are very complex. Any questions about permissible or impermissible conduct should be directed to the Office of the General Counsel.

2.10 Use of Company Funds and Assets

You are responsible for ensuring that company assets are used only for valid business purposes. Company assets include not only our equipment, funds, and office supplies, but also data processing and telecommunication assets, concepts, business strategies and plans, financial data, and other information about our business. These assets may not be used to derive personal gain for you or for others. However, incidental personal use of company assets is permitted, provided that such use is in compliance with other company policies.

The company should not directly or indirectly extend or maintain credit, arrange for the extension of credit, or renew an extension of credit in the form of a personal loan to or for any director or executive officer (or equivalent thereof) of the company.

2.11 Use of Company Electronic Media

All company communications systems, electronic mail, Internet access, and voice and text mail are the property of the company. The company's internal e-mail systems are acceptable for transmitting confidential data within the company provided the recipient has a business need-to-know and only the minimum information necessary to accomplish the bona fide business purpose is transmitted. Great care should be taken in transmitting any confidential or proprietary information over the electronic media systems.

A workforce member should not create, access or transmit messages or information on or through the company's electronic media systems that are offensive, harassing, obscene, threatening, or disparaging to others. Workforce members who abuse the company's electronic media systems may lose these privileges and be subject to disciplinary action up to and including termination.

2.12 Records Management

All workforce members are required to comply with Records Management policy which establish uniform procedures for storing, retaining and destroying corporate records, in accordance with applicable federal, state and local laws. The Office of the General Counsel may make exceptions to these policies in the event of investigations by regulators or as required by court order. The purpose of such exceptions is to preserve relevant corporate records.

2.13 Many People, One Company

The company is committed to creating a culture of inclusion where everyone, regardless of race, ethnicity, religion, age, seen or unseen disability, sexual orientation, gender identity, or veteran status, etc. can contribute at their highest levels. This focus on inclusion and diversity extends to workforce members, vendors, community partners, and stakeholders. Company initiatives focus on:

- Attracting, developing, and retaining a culturally competent workforce
- Engaging diverse communities and improving access to healthcare where it's most needed
- Keeping communities healthier and safer
- Utilizing inclusive leadership skills to support members and injured workers
- Meeting the diverse needs of our clients, members, and communities in our markets
- Supporting diverse vendors

Workforce members are expected to act in an inclusive, collaborative, and respectful manner at all times. Employees have an opportunity to come together to learn, engage and serve as allies through the Employee Resource Network (ERN) program. Comprised of several networks, ERNs also provide professional development opportunities. ERNs are open to all bargaining unit and non-bargaining unit employees.

Please refer to the corporate Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action or the Harassment HR policies to learn more about company guidelines related to inclusion and diversity.

2.14 Nondiscrimination

The company believes that applicants, subscribers, members, providers, workforce members, and members of the public have a right to be treated in a nondiscriminatory manner. The company is committed to the principles of equal opportunity and affirmative action. The company strictly prohibits any form of harassment or discrimination against an individual or a group based upon sex, race, color, national origin, religion, physical or mental disability, protected activity, age, veteran status, height, weight, genetic information, gender identity, sexual orientation, marital status, familial status, citizenship, arrest record, membership in a historically underrepresented group, pregnancy, childbirth or a related medical condition and any other characteristics protected by law, in the workplace and during work-related activities.

Any workforce member who experiences discrimination on the basis of sex, race, color, national origin, religion, physical or mental disability, protected activity, age, veteran status, height, weight, genetic information, gender identity, sexual orientation, marital status, familial status, citizenship, membership in a historically underrepresented group, pregnancy, childbirth or a related medical condition or any other characteristics protected by law, in the workplace or during work-related activities should immediately seek assistance by contacting their manager, Human Resources, the Compliance Office, or the Enterprise Compliance Officer. The company prohibits retaliation against any workforce member who utilizes such resources in good faith to make complaints of discriminatory conduct.

Discrimination includes, but is not limited to, treating an individual less favorably than others because they belong to one of the protected classifications above.

2.15 Government Investigations

If a workforce member is contacted at work or outside of work by a governmental agency or official concerning a work-related matter, the workforce member should immediately contact his or her leadership, the Office of the General Counsel, and the Compliance Office.

The Office of the General Counsel can aid in determining how to respond to the request for information. Each workforce member is entitled to consult their own personal legal counsel before consenting to an interview and to have their personal legal counsel present for any interview. The Office of the General Counsel can advise the workforce member of his or her options for personal legal counsel and will be available to attend the interview on behalf of the company.

If you do receive a subpoena or any other written request from a governmental agency, you should immediately contact the Office of the General Counsel.

2.16 Adherence to False Claims Act

The federal False Claims Act (FCA), as amended by the Fraud Enforcement and Recovery Act of 2009, prohibits anyone from knowingly submitting false or fraudulent claims to the federal government and from making false or fraudulent records or statements to a recipient of federal funds (i.e. any entity that contracts with the federal government for any purpose).

The FCA also requires recipients of federal funds to return any overpayment to the federal government. The FCA can be enforced by the Department of Justice, the United States Attorney's Office, or through qui tam actions, where an individual sues on behalf of the government.

All workforce members must comply with the FCA.

2.17 Use of Copyrighted Computer Software

The company does not condone the illegal duplication, distribution or modification of copyrighted software. Workforce members who make, acquire, distribute or use unauthorized copies of copyrighted computer software, directly or indirectly, will be in violation of this policy.

2.18 Workforce Member Relations

All company workforce members must treat each other with respect and dignity. Disruptive behaviors exhibited by workforce members will not be tolerated. Disruptive behaviors will subject the offender to disciplinary action and/or termination. Examples of disruptive behaviors include (but are not limited to) the following:

- The use of abusive, offensive or degrading language
- Intimidating or threatening physical actions
- Physical abuse/assault, including the striking of another person
- Criticism of a personal rather than professional nature
- Inappropriate touching
- Threats of violence or physical harm
- The use of sexually explicit or suggestive language

Incidents or patterns of disruptive behavior can be reported to an individual's direct leader, the Human Resource Department or the Hotline.

2.19 Criminal Convictions

The company has a legal duty to identify and consider for exclusion from its operations workforce members whose prior conduct was illegal or inconsistent with this Code and the Corporate Compliance and Ethics policy. How that conduct is related to the specific responsibilities of the workforce member, as well as how recently the conduct occurred will be taken into consideration when making hiring, contracting, or retention decisions.

All felony convictions must be disclosed to and discussed with representatives of Human Resources.

The company's Human Resources department makes decisions regarding the hiring or retention of individuals or organizations with histories of:

- Felony convictions
- Convictions for crimes of fraud, dishonesty, or other crimes that could impact healthcare or the business of insurance
- Reported or discovered misconduct

The company will not delegate substantial discretionary authority to individuals whom it knows have a tendency to engage in inappropriate, improper, or illegal conduct.

3. How We Solve Ethical Problems

Some ethical issues we face have clear and unambiguous solutions. For instance, if the law forbids a particular action, we follow the law. Often the ethical questions are not so clear cut. They present us with difficult choices. Understandably, the Code of Business Conduct cannot solve every potential dilemma. It is not an all-inclusive list of inappropriate or prohibited acts and behaviors. Rather, it is intended to be a guide to recognizing, appreciating and resolving such ethical problems.

- A. Here are suggested steps to follow if you are faced with an ethical issue, perhaps because someone has asked you to do something or refrain from doing something that makes you uncomfortable:
- Understand exactly what you are being asked to do, or refrain from doing. Get all the facts. Without them, you may be unable to find the best solution to the problem
 - Clarify your responsibility. Where do you fit in? Are there other responsible parties who should be informed? By bringing all responsible parties together, discussion often leads to a swift, satisfactory resolution of the problem
 - Ask whether the course of action is fair. If the problem isn't a clear-cut matter of law or company policy, this simple question often serves as a useful guide. If the course of action doesn't seem fair, why not? Who may be hurt? Is it the company? Our policyholders or claimants? Other workforce members? Many times, the best ethical decision is the one that seems fairest to all
 - Whenever possible, discuss the problem with your immediate leadership. This advice is basic to most situations and should be considered as you proceed through the above steps. These leaders are responsible for helping you solve problems. In most cases, your immediate leader will have a broader perspective than you do and will appreciate being brought into the decision-making process early
- B. If it is inappropriate to discuss the issue with your immediate leadership, or if those persons are not responding to your concerns, then workforce members are encouraged to report concerns to Human Resources management, Compliance Official; or, if desired, to another member of the executive management team.
- C. For Leaders: Use the 5 R's Methodology to help resolve a potential conflict of interest.

- D. Additionally, ethics hotlines, as noted on the bottom of each page, are available for workforce members or individuals to report possible violations of the law or of our ethical standards. Remember that when you make an inquiry, it will be handled as confidentially and as discreetly as possible. Nevertheless, allegations of wrongdoing will be investigated and may include some element of disclosure in the investigation. If you provide the information anonymously, no attempt will be made to determine your identity. If provided confidentially, it will be respected.
- E. No workforce member will be punished or subject to reprisal in any way because he or she, in good faith, reports a violation or suspected violation of this Code of Business Conduct, even if that report is not subsequently validated.
- F. When you make an inquiry or file a complaint about the Code of Business Conduct or related issues, management will make a written record of your inquiry or complaint and its response and forward this written record to the Compliance Office for review and follow up if necessary.
- G. Please note that your participation in internal and external investigations of perceived wrongdoing is a requirement of your employment with the company. Failure to cooperate in this regard will subject you to discipline, including possible termination of employment.

We encourage you to think about ethical dilemmas, report problems or concerns, and ensure your behavior conforms to the standards in the Code.

Because you are encouraged to act as a good corporate citizen and raise issues about questionable activities, negative actions will not be taken against you for making a complaint or disclosing information about an activity that you believe in good faith may violate this Code or any laws, even if your belief is mistaken. Anyone who attempts to retaliate against you for reporting problems or concerns will be disciplined. The expectation is that you will feel free to demonstrate good faith reporting of compliance concerns without fear of retaliation or intimidation. Any known or suspected violation of this Code or any laws need to be reported. You are obligated to immediately report instances of potential misconduct or non-compliance. Participation in internal and external investigations is required. Failure to report or cooperate in an investigation will subject you to discipline, including possible termination of employment.

Issues related to the responsibility of board ethics or compliance of director fiduciary duties may be raised directly to the Corporate Secretary at 517.708.5658.

ARE YOU A LEADER?

Use the 5 R's Methodology to help resolve a potential conflict of interest.

Record: Confirm that potential conflicts are formally disclosed to maintain transparency. For example, an associate indicates in their annual conflict of interest disclosure form that their spouse also works at the company but in a different division and there is no reporting relationship. Leaders are required to review the disclosure and provide rationale for confirming a conflict either does not exist or was effectively resolved.

Restrict: Effectively separate associates from certain parts of an activity/process to avoid a conflict. For example, if an associate has a relationship with a vendor, the associate may not make or participate in any business decisions with respect to that vendor, or potential vendor.

Remove: Actually remove an associate from duties/ responsibilities related to the conflict. Examples include transferring the associate to another project or to another area of the company.

Relinquish: Associate gives up private interest that is creating the conflict. An example would be giving up a second job.

Resign: Asking for a resignation is the most extreme solution to a serious conflict. It will only be considered if the conflict of interest cannot be resolved in any other way.

5 How We Respond to Inquiries and Reports Involving this Code of Business Conduct

The company is committed to creating a work environment that encourages and accepts inquiries and reports involving the Code of Business Conduct, suspected compliance issues, or suspected violations of federal or state law. Anyone may report a compliance concern and reports may be made confidentially or anonymously.

We will review and investigate reports of potential violations as appropriate. If criminal conduct is confirmed, our response may include actions to mitigate any harm caused. Mitigating actions could include making appropriate restitutions and assessing the company's compliance program to ensure the program is effective and consistent with applicable regulations.

If you are involved in a reported potential violation, you will be treated fairly and given an opportunity to explain your actions. Remember that when you make an inquiry or report, it will be handled as confidentially and discreetly as possible. We may, however, be required to substantiate any allegations of wrongdoing. A written record of your inquiry and our response will be made and forwarded to Human Resources or the Compliance Office for review and follow-up, if necessary.

You should feel free to raise ethical concerns in good faith without fear of retaliation or intimidation.

6 Disciplinary Action for Violations

All workforce members must comply with this Code of Business Conduct in addition to all other corporate policies. Failure to comply with this Code or any other corporate policy may result in sanctions and/or corrective action up to and including termination.

Appropriate disciplinary action may be taken against any workforce member who:

- Violates the law
- Violates the Code of Business Conduct or Corporate Ethics and Compliance policy
- Fails to report a violation of law, Code, or policy
- Fails to cooperate in internal or external investigations of alleged violations
- Fails to complete required compliance training

Workforce members who fail to take reasonable steps to identify, prevent, discontinue and report misconduct as soon as it is suspected or discovered will be subject to discipline. These behaviors are examples of situations that can lead to discipline, and do not constitute an all-inclusive list of infractions. Each situation will be evaluated individually. Appropriate disciplinary action may include termination and referral for criminal prosecution.
